

SEEDING
DISRUPTION
REMIX

a DC youth organizing fellowship for racial justice

WHAT IS SEEDING DISRUPTION REMIX?

Seeding Disruption Remix (SDX) is a DC youth organizing fellowship for racial justice. SDX fellows are high schoolers from all over DC who come together over the course of the school year to build the skills, knowledge, relationships, and courage they need to make change in their communities.

WHAT WILL I DO IN THE FELLOWSHIP?

As a fellow, you'll choose one core injustice to spend the year learning about, identifying root causes to, and working to disrupt by advocating for your freedom dreams of a more just world. You'll attend monthly sessions, conduct independent work, participate in mentor sessions with SDX alumni, and meet with SDX leaders and adult allies to refine your project idea.

You'll also have the opportunity to participate in additional activities like learning trips inside and outside of the DMV, documentary film screenings, guest speakers, interactive activities, group discussions, and political education.

Each SDX fellow will be paired with a mentor who can support their goal-setting, participation in the program, and general success in life beyond the fellowship.

You'll also have access to seed money to get your project off the ground, in addition to receiving a stipend of $1,000 for participating in the program.
